

Susan Reutershan is a land use attorney at Lerch, Early & Brewer in Bethesda, Maryland who has extensive experience in representing commercial and residential developers, individual landowners, corporations, nonprofits and biotechnology companies in all phases of land use and development throughout Maryland. Ms. Reutershan is a member of the bar associations of Maryland and the District of Columbia. Ms. Reutershan received her Juris Doctor degree from the Washington College of Law, American University, and her Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Rhode Island. Susan is a board member of Commercial Real Estate Women ("CREW"), Suburban Maryland, a member of the Government Affairs Committee for the Greater

Silver Spring Chamber of Commerce, a member of the Liaison Committee of the Maryland-National Capital Building Industry Association, a former member of the Development Committee of the Washington College of Law, American University, and a former board member of the Mental Health Association of Montgomery County. Susan has appeared on various local seminar panels, as a panelist at the National Association of Homebuilders' national convention, and has been a guest lecturer at the Washington College of Law, American University. Susan joined the HFH-MC Board of Directors in March of 2010 and provides our organization with sound legal advice and governance.